Introduction

We are proud to launch first inaugural issue of the new peer-reviewed high quality Journal under the name of Dental Science, Oral and Maxillofacial Research to the national and international dentists and oral science researchers .

It is a great honor to introduce myself as associated editor of the Journal, I am excited about the future of the journal and my ambition is to look forward to continuing to work together to make this new Journal a perfect journal and I hope you will agree that this inaugural issue represents a distinguished start for this new journal.

Our aim is to make the Journal an open access journal that will satisfactorily accommodate research manuscripts from the world wide of dentistry as we strongly believe that always knowledge must be free.

Finally it's my pleasure to invite everyone to be a part of JDSOMR by becoming a permanent reader or writer and contributing original article in your sphere to future issues.
